The EUvision Project aims to bring closer, directly promote, and present fundamental EU values in small and less developed local communities where there is a pressing need to highlight the importance of EU values for children, youth, and local populations. The project will engage at least 120 children and young people from 10 smaller local communities in the Osijek-Baranja and Vukovar-Srijem Counties. Using innovative methods such as PhotoVoice, Video Vignettes, and Digital Stories, the project will address topics such as human dignity, freedom, equality, and solidarity, encouraging children and young people to explore issues in their communities, create audio-visual content, and organize public events to highlight identified problems and inspire critical thinking among other residents.

The project also includes a series of interviews with young change makers and podcast editions covering fundamental EU values, human rights, and freedoms, as well as their promotion and protection. These themes will be discussed with guests who specialize in these topics. External community collaborators will include primary schools, citizens' associations, and local individuals who, through this project, will become more aware of the importance of addressing problems that threaten EU values due to the lack of active social engagement.
